We Remember

“Remembering” was the name of the original Conneaut Area Historical Society newsletter. Joan Barnett was the last editor, and with her death and the Covid pandemic the newsletter has not been published for a time. It seemed fitting to name this new version of the old newsletter “Renewed Remembering,” in honor of the former editors including Louise Legeza and Joan Barnett who edited and published the newsletter for so many years. We hope you enjoy it!

Onward the Octagon House!

Civil War, Contest, Ceramics, and Coincidences?

Maurine (Moe) and Jim Tanner moved to Conneaut from Virginia and they brought their Civil War collection with them. They displayed their collection in their new house on Main Street, adding to it through the years.

After Jim passed away in November 2021,

Maurine maintained the collection and eventually decided to donate it to the David Cummins Octagon House.

Moe gifted one of the artifacts from the collection to Civil War Reenactor Robert Scottie Edwards who presented two programs at the Octagon House last summer and made Civil War history real to the young people and adults who attended the programs. We at the Octagon House celebrated a Civil Weekend on December 12 and 13, displaying and explaining the Tanner Collection. Bob Lebzelter dropped by to take some video footage at our Open House on December 12th.

Our Civil War Tea took place the next day with more than twenty visitors taking tea and other refreshments and taking Retired Colonel Bill Kennedy's excellent presentation about aspects of the Civil War.

Contest

Our ceramic Civil War mascot waited patiently for us to notice him at the Conneaut Hospital Thrift Shop. His patience finally paid off! We noticed him, bought him, and brought him home to the Octagon House.

A month ago we announced a small Christmas contest to name our Civil War Union soldier mascot who stands beside Socks our feline mascot in the Civil War Dining Room at the Octagon House. Contest winner Vera Piper who is a first grader wrote that her 4th great grandfather John H. Ferguson should lend his name to our Civil War soldier mascot because "he was brave" and that she would come and visit him at the Octagon House.

It looks likely that John Ferguson is a relative of Dorothy Ferguson, a Conneaut native who taught elementary school and owned and operated an antiques shop in Conneaut for many years. Second place winner Andy Pochatko suggested Grotius Giddings and Grotius will have a photo and biography in the Civil War Room.

Ceramics

The final event that ties this Civil War room story together comes from HEDJ Ceramics studio, who operated in Conneaut for more than years. The daughter of the family noticed our ceramic soldier in the announcement of the naming contest on Face book and she commented that he was created in the studios at HEDJ Ceramics.

Up to Date and Doing with the Conneaut Area Historical Society and the David Cummins Octagon House

In June 2026, the David Cummins Octagon House Museum will celebrate the two year anniversary of its reopening in June 2024. An anniversary is a good time to evaluate the past and present and develop hopeful plans for the future. We kept the Octagon House open all last winter for tours, activities, and as a base of operations for our historical society, since the historical museum doesn't have heat. This is our second year of being open all year around.

In September 2025, we were honored when Conneaut resident Moe Tanner donated her and her late husband Jim's Civil War collection. This donation exactly fits into our Civil War era Octagon House and our mission to operate it as a museum of Conneaut history

Our second Christmas Tea, which was a Civil War themed tea. was part of our

Civil War weekend which began with an Open House on Friday night and then a Saturday Tea. We welcomed Col. Bill Kennedy (retired) as our guest speaker and featured a Civil War Menu complete with foods that would have been eaten during the Civil War.

We have accomplished and are accomplishing a lot of archival work, are organizing exhibits, are welcoming a modest number of visitors, and are creating newsletters videos, and website material.

Young people are an important part of our visitors roster and we have been thrilled to welcome students from Tyler Pew's Conneaut High School history class and anticipate return visits. We are in the process of displaying some of their historical comic books here at the Octagon House. We have also been practicing a Civil War themed historical play with the young people of the Conneaut Youth Center. Our goal is to perform it and have it videotaped for posterity.

Another important event took place over several months as we collected William Haines panoramic prints from our archives and took them to Framed on Main in Ashtabula to have them mounted and freeze wrapped. Director David Jones from the Conneaut Arts Center offered us an exhibition date for next May to allow the public to view this collection. We joyfully accepted!

We have had an exciting 2025 Hump Day History Wednesday program season at the Octagon House. Museum member Beth Anthony presented our September Hump Day History program about Conneaut businesses and historical sites . Our October Hump Day History program featured Karla Gadley presenting a program about the DAR, focusing on Conneaut's involvement in the organization.

Later in October, we presented a special program about the Marquette Bessemer No. 2 and the Pittsburgh and Conneaut Docks and Hulett Dr. Thomas Adams discussing his book about the disappearance of the Marquette Bessemer No. 2.. and theories about its location. Conneaut Historical Society President Jim Jones, vice-President Jerry Andrews, and Steering Committee member Jim Lyon who collectively accumulated more than 100 years of working experience on the dock and operating Hulett talked about their experiences and memories of the P & C Docks. We are working on a Pittsburgh & Conneaut exhibit to open in May 2026 at the Conneaut Area Historical Museum. Our November 2025 Hump Day History program featured Conneaut veterans history and a brief history of Thanksgiving.

We are anticipating the January 2026 Hump Day History program that John

Patterson, historian and teacher, has agreed to present and we are in the process of inviting trolley and railroad historian Kenneth Springirth to share some of his knowledge for our February Hump Day History Program.

Two ongoing projects close to our historical heart and working days. We are planning the second part of a fund raiser to collect enough money to pay for a model of the Marquette Bessmer No. 2, which sank in a ferocious December 7 storm in 1909. Nearly all of the crew members were from Conneaut or had close ties to Conneaut. We have found a model maker who will create one for us for 1,500 dollars. So far we have collected $400 thanks to the raffle persuasion skills of Dr. Thomas Adams. The Bessemer No. 2 Model will be part of our Pittsburgh and Conneaut Dock exhibit and portable enough so that it can spend the summer at the Conneaut Area Historical Museum and its winters here at the Octagon House as part of an exhibit about the Bessemer's crew and the impact of its sinking on Conneaut.

We are also working on a school exhibit, with the goal of illustrating the histories of some of the early Conneaut schools and teachers.

Our Octagon House winter hours are Saturdays and Sundays from 12 to 5 or by appointment. Come and visit us. As well as antiques and a unique building, we have Conneaut history displays, scrapbooks, city directories; we have school year books, and military, musical, and other interesting exhibits.

Come And See Us!

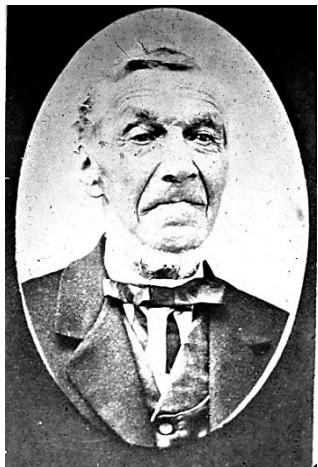

Barn Quilt Square: Conneaut Hospitals

In the fall of 2023, Steering Committee Member Debbie Herbel painted our museum Barn Quilt and it is proudly displayed on the front of our museum. We are thrilled to be a square in the Ashtabula County Barn Quilt patchwork and a traveler on the Ashtabula Barn Quilt Trail. The barn quilts celebrate Ashtabula County's agricultural heritage, including the Underground Railroad network, natural areas preservation, and Great Lakes maritime history.

Barn quilts stretch from the Ashtabula Lighthouse to the Pennsylvania borders and into Lake and Trumbull Counties. These trail guides take visitors to the heart and stories of Ashtabula County history. More than 110 barn quilts on both public and private buildings display the tourism and historical attractions of Ashtabula County. For more about the history, purpose, and quilt creators of the Barn Quilt Trail, go to their website at Ashtabula County Barn Quilt Trail.

Conneaut Hospital Stories and Voices

Reading written and spoken Conneaut Hospital Stories from many sources can create a kaleidoscope of words and facts greeting, but sometimes not meeting or agreeing.

Dr. John Venen

According to the Spaulding Research Project and Conneaut News Herald articles, Dr. John Venen holds the honor of being Conneaut's first physician. Dr. John Venen opened his Conneaut office soon after he arrived there in 1815. He practiced there until he died on March 20, 1875, and he is buried in City Cemetery.

Genealogical sources and Conneaut News Herald newspaper stories agree that Dr. George Cole established the first hospital in Conneaut, located in part of his home at 313 Main Street, in 1896.

Dr. George Henry Cole was born on September 7, 1852, in Sand Lake, New York, the son of Charles and Maria Cole. George and his brothers were raised on his father's farm and according to the 1880 census, George took up blacksmithing as a trade for a time.

In 1876, George married Rachael Rose and by 1880 they had two daughters, Maude and Mabel. Sometime in the 1880s, George and Rachael separated, and Rachael and Maude went to live in Pittsfield, Massachusetts with Rachel's older sister Urania. Mabel lived with her father, although he placed her in boarding school while he studied surgery and medicine in Albany and Cleveland. One of the four Cole brothers who became doctors, George graduated from Cleveland Medical College in 1892 at nearly forty years old.

Dr. George Cole and his daughters Maude and Mabel.

In the early 1890s, Dr. George Cole settled in Conneaut, opening a private hospital. He also served as surgeon and health officer for the New York Central Railroad for thirty years. His mother, Maria, lived with him in Conneaut until her death in 1901. In 1904, he married Alice Griffey.

Dr. George Henry Cole died on November 2, 1933, and he is buried in Center Cemetery.

Dr. Cole's hospital closed in 1920 after his death.

General Hospital

The second hospital was General Hospital, located on Harbor Street. General Hospital opened in 1898 and included a nursing school, but it closed in 1904.

An Old Timer Tells the Story of Grace Hospital and Dr. Leet

A writer identifying himself as “An Old Timer,” wrote in a Conneaut News Herald column of October 29, 1942, that he considered Dr. William H. Leet “the father of Brown Memorial Hospital. “Besides serving as Conneaut Mayor, teaching an iconic Sunday School class, serving as a high official in many of Conneaut’s fraternal orders, and returning to Conneaut as a major serving in World War I, Dr. William H. Leet also attracted attention and admiration as a transitional hospital innovator, helping to establish Grace Hospital and easing its later transition to Brown Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Leet came to Conneaut in 1902, and quickly diagnosed a pressing problem. The lack of a hospital. Then he prescribed a cure. By 1903, Dr. Leet, Miss Susie Simons, and Miss Anna Laughlin organized, equipped, and staffed Conneaut’s first hospital, and were instrumental in incorporating it as Grace Hospital.

Grace Hospital was located on the second floor of the Simons Block, next to the Conneaut Banking and Trust, above the Post Office. Begun by three founders and opening with three beds, Grace Hospital quickly outgrew its original building and its influx of patients soon made it essential to hire more doctors and nurses. Soon the hospital moved to a new building north of the New York Central railroad on Harbor Street.

The Old Timer noted that while Grace Hospital operated in a “shabby, unattractive building,” it had ample equipment and skilled doctors including Doctors Crile, Hammond, Lower, Phillips, and Fisher, of Cleveland, who performed many operations at Grace Hospital, Miss Laughlin and Miss Simons worked tirelessly with Dr. Leet to care for patients.

Grace Hospital continued to treat patients until even several building renovations couldn’t accommodate the number of people needing its services. Grace Hospital operated until 1922 when it closed down and donated its equipment to the newly formed Brown Memorial Hospital.

Charlotte Neal Remembers

Mrs. Charlotte Clara West Neal, a lifelong Conneaut resident and wife of machinist Harry Edwin Neal, recalled some of her medical memories in a reminiscence published in the December 2011 issue of Remembering, the newsletter of the Conneaut Area Historical Society.

Charlotte wrote “Remember our doctors? I can’t think of any before Drs. Raymond, Fifield, Ward, Sturtevant, and Merriman. Think how they were called out at night, through rain and snow, long distances into the country. It must have been terrible. Now, they have their cars heated and quite comfortable. In those days there were no hospitals. Dr. Cole had a private hospital.

Then the Grace Hospital was organized by Grace Pratt and Anna McLaughlin with Doctors Upton, Leet, Wilson, and Wright on the staff.

Now, we have our wonderful Brown Memorial Hospital, and a staff of doctors and nurses, with all modern equipment and drugs. How we used to have castor oil and Sulphur and molasses and asafetida. Ugh! Castor oil is still given, but now we are given shots for all ailments, sulfa drugs, and penicillin.

Grace Hospital

Brown Memorial Hospital

One of the University Hospital narratives offers a version slightly different than Old Timer and Charlotte Neal's stories. The University Hospital version says that Susie Simmonds and Ann Arthur founded Grace Hospital in 1903 and that Dr. Upson opened it with five patient rooms on the second floor of a building located at the corner of Main and Washington Streets. More and more patients using the Grace Hospital made it necessary to move to larger quarters in 1905, this time to a house at the corner of Harbor and 15 Streets. It took nurses Susie Simmons, Ann Arthur, and the remainder of the staff just one month to decorate the rooms in the new building with donated items and furnishings from the community. They purchased linens for their new buildings from Peltons General Store in Conneaut. Grace Hospital closed in 1922, donating its equipment to the newly created Brown Memorial Hospital.

On April 11, 1922, Brown Memorial Hospital opened after a successful community fund raiser. when W.H. Brown donated the family homestead to the community and the people and businesses joined to conduct a successful community fundraiser. Jessie June Hubbard became its first administrator. The new hospital continued the work of Grace and earlier hospitals and featured operating rooms and a training school for nurses.

Over the next 75 years, Brown Memorial Hospital served Conneaut and the surrounding communities. The Brown Memorial Hospital roster features hundreds of names and people stories. The names of patients, staff, nurses, doctors form an intricate yarn ball of community connection and service. Conneaut Historian

Raymond Welsh along with hundreds of other Conneaut people was treated and died in Brown Memorial Hospital.

Doctors, including Dr. William Leet and Dr. Fred Upson transitioned from Grace to Brown Memorial Hospital. Born in Greenville, Pennsylvania in 1870, Dr. William H. Leet graduated from the medical department of Western Reserve University at Cleveland in 1895. During the World War I, he served as a captain in the medical corps and was later promoted to lieutenant colonel. He served for 26 months, spending a year of his service in France. Dr. Leet settled in Conneaut in 1902, and by 1903, Dr. Leet, Miss Susie Simmons, and Miss Anna McLaughlin had organized, equipped, and staffed what would become Grace Hospital. Dr. Leet lived on Liberty Street in Conneaut with his family. He died on July 31, 1943, and he is buried in Glenwood Cemetery.

Dr. Fredrick W. Upson was born in Geneva, Ohio, on December 11, 1858. He received a literary education in the Geneva Normal Institute and in 1882, he graduated from the Western Reserve Medical College in Cleveland. Immediately after his graduation, he moved to Conneaut and established what soon grew into an extensive medical practice. He tended his patients at Grace Hospital and was a member of the Ashtabula County Medical Society.

Dr. Upson died on March 18, 1920, and he is buried in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery in Geneva.

Dr. Greenleaf Fifield and Captain Ananson Tubbs

According to the biography of Greenleaf Fifield in the Williams Brothers History of Ashtabula County, Dr. Greenleaf Fifield possessed a strong physique, towered to a height of over six feet tall, and had a balanced, resolute outlook and a calm temperament. For nearly thirty years, he faithfully doctored the people of Conneaut and Ashtabula County. Like other physicians of his time, he did not bill people but traded his services for practical items like food, tools, or whatever his clients could pay. Dr. Greenleaf Fifield also had a sense of humor and fun, and liked to participate in practical jokes. A witness to one of Dr. Fifield's jokes told his story to the Williams Brothers who included it in their Ashtabula County history.

Dr. Fifield and Captain Alanson Tubbs played the leading roles in the story. Captain Tubbs was one of Conneaut's most stalwart and well-known sailors. One day Captain Tubbs encountered the good doctor on a Conneaut street and consulted him about a minor complaint including a sore chest. Dr. Fifield told him to apply a big hemlock gum plaster to his chest. The Captain followed the Doctor's orders, but forgot to shave the hair off his chest before he covered the entire front of his breast with the hemlock gum plaster.

For a short time, the Captain felt relief and there was no soreness in his chest. Then as is the way of hemlock plasters, it began to provoke his skin to an intolerable itch. As the Williams telling of the story put it: "The man who puts on that kind of a 5 plaster to please himself will be pleased twice – when he gets it off, especially if he forgets the preliminary shave."

Captain Tubbs, courageous mariner who braved the wind and waves of Lake Erie and its companion lakes, could not summon the courage to pull the plaster away from so much hair so he suffered the consequences of his inaction. For several days he went about his daily life and rounds about town itching and grumbling and trying to find a painless way to get rid of the gum plaster. After days of Captain

DR. GREENLEAF FIFIELD.

Tubbs sharing his loud, embellished suffering laced with sophisticated sailor swearing with his family, friends, and Conneaut at large, he confronted Dr. Fifield who had parked his rig in front of one of the Main Street hotels.

A crowd quickly gathered to witness the confrontation between the doctor and the sailor. Dr. Fifield immediately realized that the hemlock plaster had to be removed and formulated an on-the spot plan to swiftly and humanely remove it. His plan involved great physical effort by the captain and focusing his attention elsewhere to make him forget the minuscule pain. Dr. Fifield called Captain Tubbs over behind his gig and leaning over the side, carefully uncovered the plaster.

Quietly and quickly he gripped the top of it and tapped old White, his horse, with his whip. Old White sprang into a run, and Captain Tubbs had to follow. Down the street they flew, but even Captain Tubb's long legs could not keep up with Old White. The plaster flew off almost abreast of Captain Tubbs.

For years after the race, Captain Tubbs told the story, laughing until he cried. He always said that he had no sooner thrown a big stone at Dr. Fifield than he prayed that the stone would not hit him, because it would have gone through him if the Captain's aim had been true. Captain Tubbs hugely enjoyed being rid of his large hemlock plaster, but he believed that the joke lasted much longer than the plaster.

If he now quietly ventured into town, the tavern patrons and other bystanders would inquire about the plaster. Captain Tubbs estimated that he paid for about five gallons of whisky by the glass, before other stories replaced the story of the hemlock plaster. The source for this story is: Sketches of its Pioneers and Most Prominent Men by Publ. Philadelphia - Williams Brothers - 1878 - Page 127 Captain Tubbs is buried in City Cemetery with his wife and son.

University Hospitals

In 1997, Brown Memorial Hospital became part of the University Hospitals system, and the University Hospital System made significant investments in equipment, facilities, and programs as well as major renovations. It expanded its services, offering comprehensive specialty care for Conneaut and the surrounding communities.
